This book provides an historical sketch of the Cold War and the lessons it provided. Having read and heard so many controversial and contradictory comments regarding the Cold War, they provided the incentive to produce an observed rendition from the 1950s to the end. Additionally, it provides information regarding the operation of both merchant and naval ships; the operation of both land based and carrier based naval aircraft, and the operation of civilian airliners. This information is portrayed throughout the book by relating actual incidents as they occurred. Newspaper files were used to confirm historical events, dates, places, and people portrayed throughout the book. All opinions and lessons learned from events are those of the author and reflect the consensus of associates at the time.
