One Season at a Time Frank J. Chamberlin IV, Matt Curry

It was the paths of fate that brought Frank and me together. We met in the north woods, a fitting place for two outdoorsmen and hunters to become friends. The north woods have a tendency to bring outdoorsmen close, a bonding of friendships that last through the oncoming years. Our stories in this book are from journals that we kept of our adventures hunting, fishing, and just being in the outdoors. I strongly encourage everyone to jot down their excursions and adventures, for just think of all the enjoyable reading it would make if everyone did this. Most important is that it will leave a record for ones grand, and great grandchildren to know what we did in our lives. The life we have led in the outdoors is not for everybody, but it is a way of life that we just did and enjoy doing, even when it is unclear what drives us. Frank and I hope all will get some enjoyment in reading our book. Again, we took the time to record the adventures, and now hopefully you will join us in reliving them in this book.
